

GEANT Data Protection Code of Conduct workshop 22 Feb 2017

Introduction

European Parliament has approved the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) which repeals the Data Protection Directive on 25 May 2018. GEANT project (GN4-2 JRA3 Task 1) is preparing a Data protection Code of Conduct for Service Providers ver 2.0 to address the GDPR and submit it to the European Data Protection Board (the successor of Article 29 working party) for approval.

The goal of the workshop is to

- present the draft GEANT Data Protection Code of Conduct 2.0 for Service Providers and how it addresses the GDPR.
- provide an opportunity for the stakeholders to discuss and present questions on the Code of Conduct to its developers.

The intended audience is

- Research communities and other parties providing services in the research and education sector who would potentially become Service Providers using the Code of Conduct to demonstrate their compliance to the GDPR.
- Research and education federation operators who would potentially integrate the Code of Conduct to their policy framework and technical infrastructure.
- Home Organisations (such as universities or research institutions) who would potentially rely on the Code of Conduct to legitimise their release of personal data to the Service Providers.
- Data subjects (such as, researchers, teachers and students) whose personal data the Code of Conduct would protect.
